

With an adaptive margin, storage holds far past $\alpha=0.5$ and recall degrades smoothly — there is no cliff

Supersedes the earlier version, which used a FIXED margin $\kappa=1$ and showed an apparent cliff at $\alpha \approx 0.6$. That was the $\kappa=1$ feasibility boundary, not a capacity limit.